The Indianapolis Company Had No Right to Put Down Tracks for Animal Power.

A Decision of the Supreme Court Finally Fixes the Status of the Citizens' Street-Railroad -Matters from the Dockets.

The Supreme Court yesterday decided the questions involved in the injunction proceedings of the Citizens' Street-railroad Company against the Indianapolis Cable Street-railroad Company. The latter, under its charter for a cable road, took possession of certain streets, and began to lay tracks, either for animal or electric power, The Citizens' company went into the Superior Court with a prayer for an injunction restraining the Indianapolis company from laying tracks on streets which complainant claimed under its charter of 1864, and the various amendments thereto. Three opinions were given in the case, that of Judge Walker granting the perpetual injunction. From this the Indianapolis Cable Company took an appeal through the general term of the Superior to the Supreme Court. Judge Walker's decision as to a perpetual injunction stands, it having been affirmed, without dissent, by the Supreme Court, Judge Coffey delivering the opinion.

It was stated by Judge Coffey that, as a general rule, neither the State nor a municipal government can grant or create a monopoly. In support of this rule the decision in the Citizens' Gas Company vs. town of Elwood was cited. "But it must not be understood," said the court, "that all monopolies are unlawful. Many things which are lawful are, from their nature and of necessity, monopolies. Such as patent rights, copyrights, the right to keep a ferry, and many other things which might be mentioned. As a street-railroad company has no legal right to lay its tracks upon the streets of a city without tracks upon the streets of a city without grantee, is not a verbal one, and is not gov-the permission of the Common Council, if erned by the statute of limitations respectshould grant such city one company and refuse to grant it to another, the company to which the right was granted would have a monopoly until such time as the Common Council should grant a similar right to some other person or company. So if the Common Council should grant to a streetrailroad company the right to lay its track on certain streets which were too narrow to admit of being occupied by other streetrailroad tracks, such company would have a monopoly of such streets. It is plain, therefore, that, while monopolies, as a general rule, are unlawful, there are many exceptions to the rule. The rule applies only to such things as are of common right, and is never to be applied to such things as are in their nature a monopoly." It was held that the grant of the use of the streets to the Citizens' Street-railroad Company was not declared in the ordinance to be exclusive. "Indeed," it was further stated, "it is not claimed by the appellee, as we understand the briefs on file, that it possesses the exclusive right to construct street railroads on the streets of Indianapolis, but it is conceded that the Common Council may grant to other persons or cor-porations the same right. When the sovereign has granted a special charter a corporation to conduct a particular business without granting any exclusive privileges over that business the same sovereign may in like manner grant special charters to other corporations to carry on the same business, and when there is a conflict of profits between them the first has no remedy. Acting upon this well-known principle, the Common Council of the city of Indianapolis granted to the appellant the right also to construct, maintain and operate street railroads upon the streets of the city of Indianapolis. At this point the question arises as to what were the rights of the appellant, in so far as they had the right to occupy the streets of the city, and the appellee as between themselves. As to unoccupied streets our opinion is that they stood upon an equality and that the controversy resolves itself into a question of first occupancy. After quoting largely from Judge Elliott's work on "Roads and streets," it was maintained that it would be unjust to permit some other person or company to jump in and appropriate any portion of the streets where another company had entered upon the construction of a particular system. In the early part of June, 1888, the appellee entered upon the construction of railroads on certain streets claimed by aprailroads on certain streets claimed by appellant. It does not appear that appellant did enything towards occupying these streets prior to July 24, 1888. "Disregarding its charter," was the statement of the court, "which authorized the construction of a cable road, it proceeded to construct one of an entirely different character. Indeed, it wholly abandoned the idea of constructing a cable road, and when engaged in constructing one of a different character, in violation of its charter, it was stopped in violation of its charter, it was stopped by the city attorney, for the reason that it was acting wholly without authority. In our opinion the appellant, by taking possession of the streets of Indianapolis with a view of constructing a street railroad other than a cable road acquired no rights in such streets, either as against the appellee or the city. It was a mere tres-

The court was not inclined to adopt the view of appellant that the question of motive power was one entirely between it and the city. The appellant and the appellee had equal rights in streets in controversy, and the first to take possession in good faith under the charter granted to it acquired the superior right. It was, therefore, competent for the appellee to prove that the possession claimed by appellant was not according to its charter.

It was claimed that the Citizens'

Street-railway Company could not sel and transfer to the Citizens' Streetrailroad Company its franchises, and that appellee by its purchase acquired no rights. "We regard this," said the court, "as an immaterial question. The appellee is a duly organized corporation for the purpose of owning and operating a street railroad in the city of Indianapolis. It is not denied that by its purchase it acquired all the property of the Citizens' Street-railway Company, except its franchises. The city of Indianapolis, about the date of the transfer of the property, granted to the appellee all the rights, privileges and franchises possessed by the Citizens' Street-railway Company. Assuming, without deciding, that the Citizens' Street-railway Company could not sell and transfer its franchises, still the right of the appellee to own, construct and operate its railroads upon the streets of the city of Indianapolis is com-

Upon the death of Michael O'Donnell formerly clerk of the Criminal Court, and ex-chief of police, and who was a widower. his little daughter was given to his brother Jerry. When the latter died his wife retained possession of the child, whose grandmother, Mrs. Bridget Ryan, wanted her. Mrs. Ryan finally took out papers as legal custodian of the child, and procured a writ of habeas corpus. The little girl was brought into the Circuit Court yesterday and Judge Howland gave her to the grandmother. Mrs. O'Donnell said she had no desire to oppose the law, but had retained possession of the child because of a warm attachment between them. The little one, who is six years old, cried bitterly upon being separated from her aunt.

THE GILMORE CONCERTS.

A Very Large Audience Greets the Great Bandmaster and His Excellent Musicians.

Nearly three thousand people heard Gilmore's band, at Tomlinson Hall, last night, and a well-pleased audience it was. Every number, except the last, was encored, and the musicians had all they could do to escape on that. The vocal soloists made a favorable impression. Mr. Lavin's tenor selection, "Celeste Aida," won him an enthusiastic recall, and he gave as an encore "Il Pensiero," from Rigoletto, Miss Ida Klein sang Meyerbeer's "Robert, toi que j'aim" beautifully. She has a strong so-prano, of excellent range, and sings ap-parently with scarcely an effort. Her encore selection was a simple love ballad, charmingly rendered. Mr. O'Mahony's bass solo "Non pui Andrai," from the "Marriage of Figaro," delighted everyone, and he responded to an encore by singing "Rocked in the cradle of the deep." Mme. Von Doenhoff's contralto solo, "My heart at thy sweet voice," was well received. The trio, "Qual volutta," by Miss Klein, Messrs. Lavin and O'Mahony, was the last of the vocal numbers and proved a charming

Of the band numbers the most popular were the "Symphonic Heroique" and the "Carnival of Venice." the latter selection giving fifteen soloists an opportunity in turn of demonstrating to the audience their skill with their instruments. Several of the encore selec-tions were delightful, one a patrol and another a waltz, especially so. In one encore, toward the close of the programme, Mr. Gilmore gave a wonderful exhibition of the command he has over his band. He made he tempo to suit himself, apparently, and the result was a peculiar and fascinating effect. The closing number was the ever popular "Trip to Manhattan Beach," which Gilmore has made famous throughout the length and breadth of the land. There was also a large and well-pleased audience at the matinee.

Articles of Incorporation. The Indian Mineral Springs Company, of Warren and Tippecanoe counties, was in corporated yesterday with a capital stock of $100,000. The directors are John W Heath, John W. Swarts and Morton Fuller. The Indian Folding-bed Company, of Goshen, was incorporated with $18,000 capital and Conrad S. Sandgreaves, Henry Kolb and Fred Schenck as directors. The Leitzman Sorghum Syrup Canning and Manufacturing Company was also incorporated, with headquarters at Mooresville. B. H. Perce, T. E. Larmier, D. B. Johnston, W. F. Ledgman and W. H. Guire are the directors, the capital stock being $15,000.

Suggestion from the Humane Society. W. H. Hobbs, secretary of the Indiana Humane Society, has written a letter to the Liverymen's Association urging that they co-operate more actively with the ilumane Society in preventing and punishing cruel treatment of their horses. The so-ciety has been much hindered by the difficulty of getting information, and the letter suggests that the names of all hirers of horses be registered.

Dropped from the List. The National Civil-service Commission has decided that an average grade of 69 and more than five-tenths 18 not 70, the necessary grade to become eligible. For that reason the names of Albert L. Kerr, Oscar W. Beech, John W. Bates, Oscar I. Hoover and Charles C. Staph have been taken from the eligible list.

Talking to the Newsboys. The Doutney meetings were well attended last night. The temperance lecturer addressed the newsboys and boot-blacks of the city, who attended in a body. Over a hundred signed the pledge to abstain from drink, tobacco and profanity. Four boys and one girl received cash prizes for making the best speeches during the evening.

Liable for Court-Martial Fines. Justice of the Peace Smock rendered his decision, yesterday, against Sergt. Campbell H. Cobb, of Company D. He decided that the defendant is liable for the fines assessed against him by the court-martial. Where Are the Prohibitionists?

If the laws of Nebraska, as they stand today upon the statutes, were strictly enforced there would be much less drunkenness than now exists. Among the dead-letter laws, that pertaining to treating in public saloons is probably the most flagrantly violated. There is absolutely no attention paid to the law. Every man who asks another to take a drink with him at a public bar is violating a State law, and is liable to arrest if any one cared to make the complaint necessary. But no com-plaints are made, and the treating goes on as though there were no law in Nebraska

WORDS OF CHEER

From Those Who Have Been Cured of Rheumatism, Asthma and Other Diseases by Gun Wa's Remedles.

Кокомо, Ind., May 5, 1890.

GUN WA: Dear Sir-You are perfectly welcome to use my name as a reference in any way that it will benefit you and suffering humanity. I firmly be-lieve that I would have gone to that bourne from which no traveler returneth had it not been for your Chinese Herb Remedies. My health is better than it has been for years, and alone to your remedies. Yes; use my name-use it a thousand times-and I hope that it will bear fruit in many ways. I am enjoying better health now than at any time in six years. Yours truly, ANNA FASH.

For the last three years I have been troubled with palpitation of the heart, and the physicians all told me I had heart disease. I became afraid, when the bad spell came on me, I should die, and when the bad spell came on me, I should die, and had given up hopes of ever getting relief. My appetite failed me, and I was not able at times to work on account of weakness. I happened to see an advertisement of Gun Wa, Chinese physician. so wrote, as a last resort, to him. He sent me a package of, his Chinese Herbs about four weeks ago, and to-day I feel like a different man. My heart trouble has all left me, and my appetite is good, and I am gaining health and appetite is good, and I am gaining health and strength every day. I can cheerfully recommend Gun Wa, knowing he has done for me what all other physicians failed to do; that is, given me MICHAEL FARRELL. 89 Painter's Row, Carson street, South Side Pittsburg, Pa.

I had been a sufferer for a long time from chronic dyspepsia, had received treatment from several doctors, but had been unable to get any permanent relief. Happening to see a notice of Gun Wa I wrote to him. He seemed to fully understand my case, and assured me that he would be able to cure me. I bought a package of his herbs for dyspepsia, and although I took it but a short time, I am positive it cured me. 1413 Carson street.

HOMESTEAD, Pa. Dear Sir-I write this to you, as I feel that it only right I should be willing to acknowledge the good you have done me. For years past I have suffered from that disease so prevalent among my sex—female trouble. My pain has been terrible at all times, and I have tried doctors and medicines without number, but all without avail. Six weeks ago I saw your card, and I corresponded with you, although without any hope of being benefited by it. You surprised me by saying you could help me, and I took your medicine regularly. It was only a few days until I commenced to notice a change for the better, and to-day, for the first time in many years, I am an entirely well woman. You are at liberty to use this in any way you may think best, as my hus-band and I are well known here, and may be able to do you some good. Sincerely yours, the famous Chinese physician, who cannot, under the American laws, practice medicine, has prepared a line of Chinese Herb Remedies for the cure of different diseases, and has opened parlors for their sale. He charges nothing for consultation, examination and advice, and only a small sum for his remedies, which have a justly celebrated reputation. A friendly talk with Gun Wa costs nothing. All of the following, which Gun Wa calls "American diseases," yield readily and permanently to these gentle, yet powerful natural remedies—catarrh, cancer, tumors, rheumatism, weakness, tare-worm, piles, scrofula, blood poisoning, dysentery, constipation, hum-bago, dyspepsia, liver, kidney and bowel troubles and all nervous diseases. Young, middle-aged or old men, suffering from nervousness, can be restored to perfect health; many have lost their vigor and become prematurely old. They should visit Gun Wa; those who cannot come should write, inclosing 4c in stamps for one of his circulars, or his book on nervous diseases; all visits and correspondence sacredly confidential. Thousands of testimonials on file.

DR. GUN WA:
